Government performance and leadership trends in SA; trust and accountability of the President

Findings from Afrobarometer Round 6 surveys in South Africa

24 November 2015, Cape Town
At a glance

- Government performance: Government rated poorly on most performance areas and mostly on economic policy areas, rated positively on welfare distribution (84%) and food security (60%).

- Leadership performance ratings: premiers enjoy the highest levels of public approval, while those for President Zuma, MPs and local government councillors have declined since 2011.

- Perceptions of President Zuma and office: public confidence in the president has decreased significantly since 2011, and almost six in 10 South Africans believe he routinely ignores Parliament and the law.
What is Afrobarometer?

- A pan-African, non-partisan survey research project that measures citizen attitudes on democracy and governance, the economy, civil society, and other topics.
- Goal: To give the public a voice in policymaking by providing high-quality public opinion data to policymakers, policy advocates, civil society organizations, academics, news media, donors and investors, and ordinary Africans.
- National Partners in each country conduct the survey. In South Africa, Afrobarometer Round 6 survey was conducted by the Institute for Justice and Reconciliation and Plus 94 Research.
Where Afrobarometer works
Methodology

- Nationally representative sample of adult citizens
  - All respondents are randomly selected.
  - Sample is distributed across [regions/states/provinces] and urban/rural areas in proportion to their share in the national population.
  - Every adult citizen has an equal chance of being selected.
- Face-to-face interviews in the language of the respondent’s choice.
- Standard questionnaire allows comparisons across countries and over time.
- Sample size in South Africa of 2,400 adult citizens yields a margin of error of +/- 2% at a 95% confidence level.
- Fieldwork for Round 6 in South Africa was conducted between August and September 2015.

Results
Key findings

- Unemployment remains by far the most important problem for South Africans, followed by housing, crime, education, poverty, and corruption. Education moved up in the priority list, but overall the problems that government should address have not changed substantially since 2011.

- Citizens rates its government poorly on most key performance areas and mostly on economic policy areas, rated positively on welfare distribution (84%) and food security (60%).

- Approval ratings of government performance on crime reduction, management of the economy and fighting corruption in government declined by more than 10 percentage points since 2011.

- In comparison to its neighbouring countries in Southern Africa - South Africa and Zimbabwe tops the list of non-performers on reducing crime, job creation, management of the economy and fighting of corruption in government.
Respondents were asked: In your opinion what are the most important problems facing this country that the government should address? (Figure aggregates up to three responses per interviewee.)

Trust and accountability of the President
Key findings

- Public distrust of the president (66%), disapproval of the president’s performance (62%), and perceived corruption in this Office (46%) are all at their highest levels since 2000.

- Indian and White South Africans are the most critical of President Zuma, along with urban residents and non-ANC supporters.

- Perceptions that the president ignores the law and Parliament more than doubled between 2011 and 2015 to almost six in 10 South Africans.
Respondents were asked:

The president and the law | 2002-2015

Respondents were asked: In your opinion, how often, in this country:
1. Does the President ignore the courts and laws of this country? (% “always/”often”).
2. Does the President ignore parliament and just do what he wants? (% “always/”often”).
Conclusions
Majority of South Africans agree on the most important problems facing the country and want government to do a better job at a range of issues, including increasing employment, reducing crime, and greater access to housing.

Elected leaders are not insulated from changes in public opinion – dissatisfaction with performance increased for President Jacob Zuma, MPs and local elected councillors.

President Jacob Zuma faces the worst ratings of any elected leader in South Africa’s 21 years as a democracy, even among the ANC’s traditional electorate.
