

Popular Attitudes toward Democracy in Benin: A Summary of Afrobarometer Indicators, 2005-2008

20 October 2009

This document provides a summary of popular attitudes regarding the demand for and supply of democracy in Benin as revealed over the course of two Afrobarometer surveys conducted between 2005 and 2008 (April-May 2005, N=1198; June-July 2008, N=1200). Samples of this size yield a margin of error of +/- 3 percent at a confidence level of 95 percent. The charts that follow capture perceptions of:

- The meaning of democracy;
- The demand for democracy (including individual support for democracy, patience with democracy and rejection of military rule, one-party rule, and one-man rule);
- Support for democratic institutions (including attitudes towards elections, term limits, multi-party rule, and checks on presidential powers); and
- The supply of democracy (including satisfaction with democracy and the perceived extent of democracy, quality of elections and the protection of key freedoms).

Points of Interest

- Popular support for democracy is strong in Benin, and it appears to be increasing (2.1), although with only two data points it is too soon to draw any firm conclusions. Rejection of military rule also appears to be increasing, although tolerance for one-party rule may be on the rise (2.2-2.4)
- Patience with democracy also increased substantially from a minority of 43% in 2005 to a majority of 58% in 2008 (2.5)
- There has been a significant drop in support for elections as a means of selecting leaders (3.1), though again, it is too soon to identify a trend. There was also a smaller drop in support for presidential adherence to the law (3.5). Otherwise, though, commitment to democratic institutions and practices is relatively strong and consistent.
- Beninese overwhelmingly support checks on presidential powers by parliament and checks on the government by media (3.6, 3.8). In contrast, a majority of respondents believe that opposition parties should cooperate rather than criticize the government (3.7).
- Both the perceived extent of democracy and the level of satisfaction with the performance of democracy have increased very substantially in Benin since 2005 (4.1-4.2). Ratings of election quality have also improved (4.3).
- Overwhelming majorities of Beninese report that their freedoms of speech, association and voting are very secure (4.5-4.10).

The Afrobarometer, a cross-national survey research project, is conducted collaboratively by social scientists from 20 African countries. Coordination is provided by three Core Partners: the Center for Democratic Development (CDD-Ghana), the Institute for Democracy in South Africa (IDASA), and the Institute for Research in Empirical Political Economy (IREEP, Benin). Michigan State University and the University of Cape Town serve as Support Units to the project. In addition, National Partners in each country directly manage survey fieldwork and data management.

Over the course of four rounds of surveys between 1999 and 2009, many donors have supported the Afrobarometer's research, capacity building and outreach activities. We are grateful to the the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA), the Department for International Development (DfID-UK), the Royal Danish Ministry of Foreign Affairs (RDMFA/DANIDA), the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency (SIDA), and the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) for the support that they have provided to Round 4 of the Afrobarometer. Previous support was also provided by the African Development Bank (ADB), the Calouste Gulbenkian Foundation, Michigan State University (MSU), the Netherlands Ministry of Foreign Affairs (NMFA), the Norwegian International Development Agency (Norad), and the World Bank.
